

POLITICAL GOSSIP.

News comes from Washington to the INTELLIGENCER that the slate, so far as the three big offices in West Virginia are concerned, collector of internal revenue, district attorney and marshal, is practically decided on except as to marshal. Gilkeson will be collector and Watts district attorney; but no man can tell as yet who will be marshal. Not that this place had not been included in the slate, or in several different slates. It had. When McCorkle, Watts, Ohley, Chilton, et al., were in Washington ten days ago a slate was agreed on; but it has been broken, or at least cracked badly. The contest for marshal has been between Garden, Vinson and Crawford. The Camden crowd arranged two different combinations—the first with Garden as marshal, and the second, and existing one, with Vinson as marshal and Garden as chief deputy, with a slice of the salary and a voice in the patronage. When John Crawford, of Marshall county, went to Washington and found this out there was music in the air. The music is still playing, not so loudly and sweetly, but vigorously, and with red-hot attachments in the wings. That is what has produced the cracks in the slate. Senator Faulkner is for Crawford, as a matter of course, and Representative Pendleton says he is neutral. Crawford bases his claims purely on party services. He is of the opinion that he did more to break up the Alliance movement in Wetzel and to reduce the Republican majority than any other dozen men, and now if his services are not to be awarded, he proposes to know the reason why. Crawford's endorsements are first class, but the Camden-McGraw-Wells-State House crowd don't think he can win. There was never a prettier fight as it stands than this, and both sides are agreed that the contest will be doubtful until the last moment perhaps.

This fight has little or nothing to do with the campaign for such other good things as the administration may see fit to bestow upon the state. There does not now seem to be any reason to change the predictions already made in the INTELLIGENCER. Hon. Joseph S. Miller will in all probability be offered the internal revenue commissionership and Col. Alex Campbell, it is said, may be consul-general to Melbourne. It is not known if this combination will interfere with Mr. Jepson's candidacy for the United States treasuryship, but possibly it may. At any rate West Virginians in Washington are agreed that the two places above mentioned are as good as decided on, and the West Virginians should know, for there are enough of them in the city to decide a state election, and they still go. In fact there are few states in the union left unrepresented at this time. The inauguration crowds are there. Major Dink Bots, of Georgia, and the Hon. Abe Sinsper, of New York, are both there now and their associates are arriving as fast as trains can carry them. Major Bots will still be in Washington six months from now; so will the majority of his associates.

Speaking of Hon. Alex Campbell's chances for the Melbourne appointment, reminds me that there is a very pretty fight on, directly in that connection, which may complicate matters in the Panhandle somewhat and seriously embarrass Mr. Pendleton. Col. Campbell is not the only applicant from this section for a consular place. It is well known that Captain L. S. Delaplain, of the Wilson Tariff Students, desires to go to Havre, France, and is being strongly pushed for the place by the young Democracy of Wheeling with whom he is associated and of whom he is a popular representative. He is endorsed by the entire West Virginia congressional delegation, excepting perhaps Mr. Pendleton, and his claims will be especially looked after by Hon. William L. Wilson and Mr. Camden. This may interfere with Colonel Campbell's chances, since there may be an aversion to giving the Panhandle two places out of West Virginia's quota of foreign appointments. Here is where Mr. Pendleton's embarrassment will come in. He can scarcely ignore the tariff club, composed of young working Democrats who saved him from slaughter in the recent election by jumping into the breach at a time in the campaign when the outlook was exceedingly gloomy for him, and yet he would not protest against the colonel's appointment.

It is not probable that in a square stand-up fight over patronage Mr. Pendleton would be much "in it" with Mr. Wilson, but should it be decided that Mr. Pendleton should have a voice in the honoring of his own constituents, a condition and not a theory would confront him. It should be borne in mind, however, that consular positions, not being local offices, properly come under the head of "patronage-at-large," and congressional district lines or local considerations are seldom, if ever, taken into account. Because an applicant happens to live in a certain congressional district his case is no more to be disposed of by the member from that district than would that of the applicant for collector, marshal, or any other of the appointments at large. A consul does not go abroad to represent a single congressional district, but the whole United States. In naming West Virginians to fill these positions the President will, in all probability, consult the entire delegation. There would then be nothing reasonable in the way of giving both Captain Delaplain and Col. Campbell what they are after.

But some of the young Democrats who are actively pushing Captain Delaplain's cause have suggested that Colonel Campbell's appointment, if it be made, should be charged to Louisiana's account on the books of the state department, which they say, would relieve the West Virginia delegation of any embarrassment. They could urge his claims just as earnestly. They say the colonel's interests are more directly with Louisiana than West Virginia. However this may be, if both gentlemen are appointed it won't disrupt the Democracy of the state. If only one of them gets there some interesting developments may be looked for. The Tariff Students are a growing power here in politics and have unanimously requested Mr. Delaplain's appointment as the only favor they will ask of the administration as an organization. On the other hand, Colonel Campbell is something of a power himself. His long service to the Democratic party is well known.

Some caustic comments are being indulged in by Wheeling Democrats regarding Mr. Pendleton's attitude with reference to appointments. It is recalled that soon after the election he took snap judgment and insulted the working Democrats of the district by announcing that he had selected all the postmasters without consulting the wishes of the local leaders, and by no-doing he has brought on a state of affairs which may result in an anti-snapper convention two years hence. Now, it is said that, not satisfied with this arbitrary course, he proposes to go further and actively work to fix his relatives who have aspirations before attending to the claims of other Democrats just as deservingly. A Democratic politician said to me the other day that when the "divvy" is completed and the Pendleton slate goes through there will be enough of his relatives in office to hold a family reunion. Among those kinsmen whom he desires to be present at the board will be John O. himself, his brother Henry, Eugene Hanke (Mr. Pendleton's private secretary), Mr. Wilson (who wants to be postmaster), young Mr. Campbell, slated for postmaster at Bethany, Mr. Jepson (who confidently expects to handle the finances of this great and glorious nation), and possibly other relatives for whom invitations have been issued. It is known that Col. Alex. Campbell is pushing his claims independently of Mr. Pendleton.

Governor-elect MacCorkle's selection of Chairman Will Chilton to be secretary of state, verifies the prediction made by the INTELLIGENCER during the campaign, and which was vigorously denied at the time. It also disposes of Secretary Ohley's chance for something good under the new state administration. An interesting inside fact in this connection is that Mr. Ohley narrowly missed being retained in his present office. Chilton had been slated for United States district attorney, and in the event of his appointment Mr. Ohley was to be retained as secretary of state. But General Watts suddenly loomed up. He demanded the attorneyship as his right and got on the slate. Chilton had to be provided for and Ohley, who did more sharp work to pull the scattered Democracy together and win the state which everybody admitted was in danger of going Republican than any other man on the state committee, was left out in the cold. But Ohley will be taken care of. At one time he was in a position to be slated for collector of internal revenue, but let the chance slip. The big combination which will control federal patronage recognize his deserts, however, and I am told he will be nicely "fixed." And he ought to be.

BELLAIKE.

All Sorts of Local News and Gossip from the Glass City.

Very few Bellaire people went to St. Clairsville yesterday to attend the meeting to finally decide whether the debt of the county and bridge funds should be bonded or carried by temporary loans at the highest rate of interest. The debt was created without any general conference of the people of the county, and most of them seemed content to allow the commissioners to attend to it without advising them. But some of the politicians embraced the opportunity to assail the present officers of the county.

The board of health will meet at the mayor's office this afternoon and will determine upon active measures in having the city thoroughly cleaned at once. The dread of cholera still lingers in the minds of members of boards of health, but from the appearance of some back yards there is little fear among the people most liable to get it.

W. J. Berry, against whom the county commissioners brought suit for alleged overpayments on stone-work, on which he was superintendent, was in the city yesterday on his way home. He was feeling quite well over the failure of the county to make a case, as they failed to prove that he wilfully and knowingly made improper estimates.

An interesting joint meeting of the Woman's home and foreign missionary society and of the young ladies' society will be held at the First M. E. church this afternoon. A missionary map talk by Miss Battelle, selections by Misses Boyd and Nevans, solos, etc., will be features of the exercises.

Harry W. Sheets was married yesterday to Miss Mary Harris, at the residence of the bride's parents in Paris, Ills. Mr. Sheets is a young business man of this city and will return here with his bride.

William A. Kelly, the young man so badly burned at the blast furnace in Benwood Monday, died yesterday at noon. He suffered ever since the accident is described as terrible.

William Maddox, a frequent visitor in police court for drunkenness, was sent to the stone pile at St. Clairsville yesterday to work out a fine of $5 and costs for his last drunk.

The new chemical engine was yesterday placed in charge of the Second ward company, and charged ready for business at the first fire.

The young people's working society of the First M. E. church was pleasantly entertained at the home of Rev. D. W. Chandler last night.

Rev. W. H. Tate will preach the annual sermon to the G. U. O. F. at St. Paul's A. M. E. church next Sunday.

County Treasurer Frank B. Archer was in town yesterday after money for some of the depleted county funds.

William B. Hill yesterday bought a lot in Barnard's addition and will build a home for himself this spring.

John Wilson yesterday let a contract to Col. Williams to build him a residence in the Fourth ward.

The probabilities are Bellaire will have another new glass factory this spring.

MARTIN'S FERRY.

News Notes and Personals from Our Near Neighbor.

Considerable misrepresentation has been going the rounds concerning the little strike at the Elson glass works this week. The fact is that only a few boys were off but one night and they returned to work at the price they had been getting. A Wheeling correspondent of the Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph had in that paper this story: "Fifty boys employed in the Elson glass works at Martin's Ferry, struck to-day for an advance in wages. The strike was endorsed by the men and the entire factory, employing over 200 men, is idle."

Charles H. Schaeffer, the man who was shot and killed while attempting to arrest the bank robbers at Leechburg, Pa., was formerly a resident of Martin's Ferry. He worked at the Standard mill.

Rev. W. H. Burbank, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church, who has been laid up with typhoid fever the past two months, will occupy his pulpit Sunday afternoon at 3:30.

Several of the jurors in the Patterson suit wanted to give Mr. Patterson $4,000 damages, and it was owing to the efforts of two of the jurors that the verdict was for only $500.

Mr. Thos. Schofield, of Martin's Ferry, who is attending college at Gambler, is a member of a quartette which sings in four different cities this week.

The Baptist church is about completed. Services will be held in it Sunday, March 12, for the first time. The dedication will take place a little later.

Mr. J. T. Hanes is confined to bed by illness.

While Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Robbins were at church on Wednesday night the clothes line was stripped of the day's washing.

The clothes pin congress held a very interesting session in Alex Davidson's shoe shop yesterday afternoon and last evening.

BENWOOD.

Industrial Items, Personal Gossip and General News Notes.

Quite a number of Democratic leaders left yesterday for Washington, chief among them being Mayor Mahood, Marshal Gocke and Messrs. James Barrett, M. Carroll and Lawrence McGarrell. During Mr. Mahood's absence P. Drannon will act as mayor and A. Lacey as stationmaster in his stead and C. Sprout will act as marshal.

Thomas McMillan had the flesh torn entirely away from his jaw by a horse Wednesday afternoon. He passed under the horse's head to adjust the scales for weighing coal, never dreaming of danger as the horse had always been very gentle previous to that, when the animal snapped at him, leaving the bone bare.

Several complaints have been heard that one of the new conductors of the electric cars has behaved in an unseemly manner in passing ladies on the streets. This should be stopped, as much indignation is felt and expressed.
